

E&O and D&O Insurance: Wrongful Acts & Loss

Tuesday, October 8, 2019 | 8:45am – 12pm PST | Insurance Institute of BC

CLASSROOM | TRENDS | TECHNICAL

Liability insurance for professionals (E&O), and directors and officers (D&O) is structured and operates differently from typical general liability insurance. This seminar will explore legal issues affecting both underwriting and claims, including the border between CGL and E&O coverages in the construction context; key drivers for E&O and D&O claims; control of the defence and allocation of defence costs; and a review of recent cases of note.

SEMINAR OBJECTIVES

- Review key concepts of claims made and reported liability policies such as wrongful acts, loss, claims, conditions precedent, and notice applicable to both E&O and D&O policies
- Outline extent of coverage for "professional services" under CGL and E&O policies for contractors and consultants
- Discuss professionals' contractual limitations of liability and aggregation clauses
- Discuss directors' liability for emerging risks including cyber and marijuana
- Provide a summary of key trends and recent legal developments affecting E&O and D&O insurance

SEMINAR PRESENTERS

Brian Rhodes, Partner – Dolden Wallace Folick LLP

Brian practices insurance law exclusively. Brian's practice has a particular emphasis on construction law, professional liability, and product liability. He has appeared as counsel at all levels of court in British Columbia and Alberta, as well as the Ontario Superior Court and the Supreme Court of Yukon.

Paul Dawson, Associate – Dolden Wallace Folick LLP

Paul has been practicing law since 2001. He advises insurers on coverage, representing them in coverage proceedings, and assists with drafting and revising policy wordings. Paul has particular expertise in cyber liability and privacy-related claims. He defends insureds under general liability (CGL), errors and omissions (E&O), directors and officers (D&O), and other specialty lines of liability insurance.
