Short Term Rentals from Airbnb to VRBO

Friday January 20, 2017

1:00 – 3:45 pm | Victoria

The sharing economy is continually stretching the way we live our lives, and the short term rental industry is no exception. Airbnb, HomeAway and VRBO are just a few of the hosting services available today. Join our legal experts as they discuss some of the current legal issues and concerns all insurance professionals must be aware of.

SEMINAR OBJECTIVES

- Identify coverages and exclusions in a homeowners policy for short term rentals
- Discuss property and liability coverages provided by hosting services
- Explain the relationship between a homeowners policy and the hosting services coverages
- Examine strategies that the insurance industry can implement to deal with these risk exposures

SEMINAR PRESENTERS

Satinder Sidhu, Partner, Clark Wilson LLP

Satinder represents clients in a variety of insurance related matters including liability defence, property subrogation and coverage advice. She specializes in construction-related claims, fire loss, environmental contamination and traumatic injury claims. Satinder appears as counsel in all levels of court and has extensive experience representing clients in mediation. She regularly writes and speaks on insurance and construction related topics and is also a member of the Canadian Bar Association Construction and Insurance Sub-Sections and Canadian Defence Lawyers Association.

Raman Johal, Partner, Clark Wilson LLP

Raman specializes in liability, property and coverage related issues under commercial liability, motor vehicle and home owners policies. She is the past Chair of the CBA BC Insurance Group Subsection, a member of the Insurance Bureau of Canada's P&C Decision Panel, and contributes to Clark Wilson's Insurable Interest newsletter. She is fluent in French and Punjabi and has attended in all levels of BC Courts and actively participates in mediations.
